A well-thought-through organization design, explicitly linked to the overall strategy, can unleash latent organizational energy and improve overall performance. A design is more than lines and boxes; it includes defining accountabilities, outlining processes and linking mechanisms, ensuring top-team alignment, and supporting performance culture. Our approach to the design process is robust and collaborative beginning with a deep understanding the current situation and securing cross-functional involvement and rigorous execution.

We collaborate with Information Technology and Line of Business management to align IT strategy with corporate objectives by refining the practice of IT Governance (leveraging COBIT and COSO reference frameworks).
